Truly last nite wuz a rite ov trubbles with us. We wuz kept awok all the fore part ov the nite with cats fitein—it duz beet all how they went on, how menny there wuz ov them—I dont no—Josiah thought there wuz upwards ov 50-I my-self made a kalm estimate ov between 3 and 4. But I tell u they went in strong, what there wuz ov em. What under heavens they found to talk about so long, and in such unearthly voices, iz a mystery 2 me. U couldn't sleep no more then ez if u wuz in Pandemonium, and about 11 I guess it wuz, I herd Thomas Jefferson holler out ov his chamber win-

"U hev preached long enuff brothers on that text—I'll put in a seventhly for u," and then I herd a brick fall. "Uve protracted ure meetin here plenty long enuff. U may adjurn now to somebody clses winder and exhort them a spell." Then I herd another brick fall. "Now I wonder if u'll kum round on this circuit agin rite away." His room is rite over ourn, and I raised up in end ov the bed—and hollered ont to him to "stop his noise." But Josiah sed—"Do let him be, do let him kill the old creeters, I am

Sez I, "Josiah I dont mind his killin the cats—but I wont have him talken about their holdin a protracted meetin, and preechin, I wont have it," sez I.

"Wall sez he Do lay down, the most I care fer is to get rid ov the cats."

Sez I, "U do have wicked streaks, Josish ad the way that that how went siah, and the way u let that boy go on is awful—sez I, where do u think u will go to Josiah Allen?"

Sez he, "I shall go into another bed if u cant stop talkin, I hev been kept awoko till midnite by them creeters, and now u want to fuish the alte."

want to finish the nite."

want to finish the nite."

Josiah is a real even tempered man—but nothin makes him so kinder fretful az to be kept awoke by cats, and it is awful—awfuly mysterious 2. For suntimes 2z you listen, u say wildly to urself—how kan a animal so small giv utteranse to a noise so large, large enuff fer a clifant. Then sumtimes agin u will git enkouraged thinkin that last rawl has realy finished em—fer u think they are at rest, and better off than they kan be here in this world utterin such deathly and terrific shricks—and u no u are hap-pier. So u will be real enkouraged, and begin to get sleepy—when they'll break out agin all ov a sudden seemin to say out ight an over a worder with a small fine voice—"we wont go home till mornin," drawin out the "mornin" in the most threatnin and insultin manner, and then a great hourse grum voice will take it up—"We Wont Go Home Till Mornin." And then they will spit fiercely, and shrick out the appaulin words both togati r. It iz diskouragin and I couldn't deny it, so I lay down, and we both went to sleep.

I hadn't more then got into a nap when Josiah waked me up groanin. And sez he, "Them darned cats are at it agin."

ngin."
Wall sez I, "U neednt swear so if they be." I listened a minute and sez I--"it aint cats."

"Sez he..."It iz."

Sez I, "Josiah Allen I no better—it aint cats."

"Wall What is it," sez he, "if it haint."

I sot up on end ov the bed, and push'd back my nite cap from my left ear and listened and sez I, "It is akordeun."

"How kum a skordeun under our win."

It aint eften I set up, but when I do Josiah knows I will be minded, so finaly he took off his hat and kum back to bed. And there we had to lay and listen. Not I word could Tirzah hear, fer her room is clear to the other end ov he house—and such a time as I had to keep Josiah in the bed. The first he played wiz what they called an involuntary, and I konfess it did sound like a cat, before they get to spittin and tearin out for n I konfess it did sound like a cat, before they get to spittin and tearin out fur u no they'll go on kinder melankolly. He went on in that wa fer a length ov time which I cant eet down with any kind ov akuracy, Josiah thinks it wuz about 2 hours and a ½, I myself dont believe it wuz more than a ‡ ov an hour. Finaly he broke out singin a true the korus ov which wuz—

My skiff is by the shore
She's light, she's free
To ply the feathered oar Miss Allen,
Would be joy to me
And as we glide along,
My song shall be
(If you'll excuse the liberty Tirzah)
I love but thee.

Tra la la Miss Tirzah Tra la la Miss Allen Tra la la tra la la My dear young maid.

He then broke out into another piece the chorus of which wuz Curb oh curb thy bosoms pair

'No u wont' sez Josiah 'u wont never "No u wont" sez Josiah "u wont never get away, I will get up Samanthee."

Sez I in low but awful accents, "Josiah Allen if u make another move I'll part with u," sez I "it does beet all how u keep actin to nite, haint it az hard fer me az it iz fer u?" Sez I, "du u think it iz eny kumfert fur me to lay here and hear it?" Sez I "that iz jest the wa with u men, u haint no more patience than nothin in the world—u wuz young once yourself."

"Threw that in my face agin will d? What if I wur! Oh do hear him go on" see he shal in his fist, "bear him agin'curb oh curb thy bosoms pain." If I wus out there my young feller I would give u a pain u couldnt curb so easy—though it might not be in your bosom."

See I "Josiah Allen u have showed more wishedness to nite than I thought u had in u"-See I I would ulike to have ure passure—and Descon Todd and Sin-u had in u'-Ser I would u like to have ure pasture—and Descon Todd and file-ter Gayes, hear are rerespant threats? If yu wuz iayin helpless on a sick bed—would a be throwin your arms about—and shakin your fist in that way?" Sez I "it scares me to think a pardner of mine should keep actin as u have, sen a u have fell 25 cents in my estimation to nite."

Wall' see he "what kumfert is there 'Wall' see he "what kumfert is there in his prowlin round here, makin two old folks lay all nite in perfect agony."

"It haint much after midnite, and if it wuz," sez I in a deep and majestic tone —"Du u kalenlate Josiah Allen, to go through life without any trouble? If u do u will find yeurself mistaken." Sez I, "Do be still."

"I wont be still, Samantha."

Jest then he begun a new piece durin which the akordeun sounded the most melankolly and cast down it had as yet, and his voice wuz solemn and affectin. I never thought much ov Augustus Peedland dick, he is Thomas Jefferson's age, about 17, his mustash is if possible thinner than hissen, I should say whiter—only that is a impossibility. He is jest the age when he wants to be olde, and when folks willin he should, for u dont want to call him Mr. Peedick, and to call him

I feel so weak and overcame.
That tears would burst from my syelid,
Did not my stern manhood forbid;
For Tirzah Ann,
I am a melankolly man.

I skorn my looks-what are no buts To such a wretch—or siks cravats;
My feelins prey to such extents
Vittles are of no konsequence;
On Tirzah Ann,
I am a melankolly man.

I'm wasten slow, my last years vests, Hang loose on me—my mightly rests Are thin as ganze—and thoughts ov u, Gashes em madly through and through. Oh Tirzah Ann, I ~m a melankoily man.

My heart is in such burning state,
I feel it soon must confligrate;
But ere I go to be a gost,
What bliss, couldst thou tel me thou
Sweet Tirzah Ann,
Think of this melankolly man.

Augustus Peedick, but truely everybody haz their strong pints, there wuz quavers put in there into them "oha!" that never can be put in again by anybody—even Josiah lay motionless listonin to em in a kind ov awe. Jost then we herd Thomas

Oh think ov me—Oh think ov me.

'No danger ov our net thinken on u' sez Josiah—"ne danger on it." It wuz a long peece and he played and and sung it in a slow and affecten manner. He then played and sung the follering

When they came to bearing fruit, he would frequently have as many as half a dozen propa about a tree, to keep the long switchy limbs from breaking down. After the battle of Fredericksburg, while giving small doses of brandy to a dying man, a low pleasant voice said "Madam." It came from a youth not "Madam." It came from a youth not over eighteen years of age, seemingly yery ill, but so placid, with that earnest,

"I want Perry," was his only wish. On inquiry, I found that Perry wis the friend and companion who marched by his side in the field and slept next to him in camp, but of whose whereabouts I was ignorant. Armed with a requisition from our surgeon, I sought him among the sick and wounded at all the other hospitals. I found him at Camp Jackson, pp. him in my subulance, and on arrival at my own hospital found my patient had dropped asleep. A bed was brought and placed at his side, and Perry, only slightly wounded, haid upon it. Just then the sick bay awoke, wearily turned over, and the half-unconscious eye fixed itself. He must have been dreaming of the meeting, for he still ditrusted the reality.
